

Potential Position Categories for Peak Resilience and Wellbeing Task Force

Selection of Taskforce Membership

The eighteen (18) members of the Peak Resilience and Wellbeing Taskforce were intentionally selected to ensure a balanced, multidisciplinary, and community-informed body capable of addressing the complex factors influencing behavioral health and wellbeing.

Membership reflects a cross-section of disciplines, including clinical and behavioral health, public health, education, youth development, emergency response, and community-based services, ensuring that both prevention and intervention perspectives are represented. In addition, specific consideration was given to including voices from historically underserved populations, individuals with lived experience, and representatives with expertise in language access and health equity.
