North Carolina General Statute 20-187.2(a) allows the governing body of a municipality to, upon request, declare as surplus the badge and side arm of a retiring police officer. The statute states that the badge is to be awarded at "no cost" to the retiring member and that the side arm be awarded "at a price determined by such governing body".

Apex Police Sergeant Deborah Hansen retired from the Apex Police Department effective October 1, 2025, and has made a request to be awarded her badge and service handgun.

Former Apex Police Sergeant Deborah Hansen began her career at the Apex Police Department on October 16, 2006. Previously she served the City of Hickory, North Carolina, in their Police Department from October 1998 through 2004.

In recognition of her over twenty-five (25) years of service in law enforcement, Chief Johansen requests that one "Police Officer" badge and one handgun (described below) be declared "surplus", that the price for such handgun be set at $1.00 (One Dollar) and that the badge and handgun be awarded to Former Apex Police Sergeant Deborah Hansen.
