REQUEST:

The property owners at 1301 Church Street have local Historic Landmark designation.

BACKGROUND/HISTORY:

The structure was built between 1858-1867 and is comprised of two one-story wooden buildings each being 18 feet by 16 feet. These two buildings bear near identical resemblance to the barracks that were added for the Bastrop Academy/Military Institute in 1858. There are records and firsthand accounts of these barracks being sold and citizens moving them onto their property. The structure was built with square nails and hand-mortised joints.

Sometime after 1907 the owner added an L onto the church street end of the original building, which included a portion of the west "barrack". This created a T shaped house plan with simple Victorian features. At some point seven-foot-wide porches were added. In 1983 William Kesselus added an 18 (eight-teen) foot extension to the east following the same roofline. Then in 2003 the owners added porches to the front and the northwest of the house. The changes to the structure can be seen between the 1921 and 1934 Sanborn Insurance maps.

In addition to the architectural significance, the property has been associated with many people in the past such as James R. Nichols, M.B. Maynard and Dryer Moore to name a few. Details can be found on page 10 of attachment 2. A site layout, property details, and current pictures of the property are attached for the Commission to review and determine if 1301 Church Street meets two or more of the criteria in the policy explanation below.
