Hello,

I am a concerned citizen whose values and opinions align with those expressed by Ms. Wagner. We have moved beyond a time when there is any justification for new gas stations. Our world is no longer approaching a critical juncture on climate change; we're there. Concerns have been expressed quite vehemently by generations from the current Gen Alpha all the way back to before my group of Millennials were young people. We can not continue to act as if nothing is wrong. We must take actions aligned with science.

If a "fuel station" of some kind is unavoidable, it should be focused on fast, efficient, electric vehicle charging. There is no justification that can warrant continued interaction with fossil fuels.

Do the right thing.

Best regards,
Jessica Niles
