City of Camas and Residents:

Ever since I heard about the possibility of this tower, I have been doing research on ramifications of a cell tower placement in a heavily populated area. The research is inconclusive and concerns will probably only be addressed many years down the road. For myself, I personally mostly have concerns about noise pollution and property devaluation. In the larger picture, however, it doesn't make sense to me to put one so close to schools where children will be exposed to possible hazards for many hours for nine months out of the year. What really struck me more than anything is how much stricter regulations are in Europe than in our country. Why are countries like India and Russia more regulated than the US? To me that creates a red flag. Is profit and "progress" more important than the health of our children? Bonnie Jean Ione, 65 yards away
