Description Leather "Slim Jim" style holster. One piece of leather folded in half and held together by straight stitch (6 stiches to the inch) from proximal to distal end along edge of leather. Straight stitch is approximately 0.4cm in from edge of leather. On distal end of holster, second straight stitch used to round edge of leather (as finish stitch?). Base of holster is open and barrel of Richards Conversion extends through holster. Ventral side, 2nd piece of leather (8.2 x 4.4cm) used as belt loop. Dorsal end attached by circular brass/metal rivit. Center of rivit protrude above surface of leather. Proximal end, leather is folded over and sewed in place (probably straight stitch). On proximal end of holster, leather is convex then dips down to concave and comes to a point where is is attached by a straight stitch. Concave area cut out in close proxcity to trigger guard. Leather once had darkbrown finish-pottions of finsih have since worn off. Holster appears to be commercially manufactured based on stitching and construction.

Description Leather belt 6-8 oz. thickness full grain (4.5cm wide by 76.2cm length) attached to brass buckle (see ART.2006.06.01.4.1). Dorsal side of belt along proximal & distal sides are 2 vertical raised tooled lines which protrude above leather and finish edges. 2nd piece of leather (1.75cm wide) is centered and attached to belt. Leather width is "bunched up" to form a series of loops for Colt 44 center fire cartridges. This appears to be a later addition to belt. There are approximately 37 loops on belt. Portion of cartridge belt held in place w/ leather cord wrapped through loops and criss-crossed on ventral side. Ventral side of belt shows how leather belt loops were attached. 2 series of holes -possibly an earlier attempt to hold leather loops in place, then replaced by spotty and irregular stitching-hand sewn? Portion of belt is threaded through brass belt and attached using two vertical straight stitch-most likely-machine stitched. Dorsal side of belt has been dyed dark brown. Ventral untreated-leather . Two Colt 44 center fire cartridges still in belt loops. Cartridges show extensive tarnish/corrosion.

Description (1) three foot light brown/buff sandstone sculpture of Deadwood resident and businessman Michael Russell, carved by New York sculptor James H. Riordan. Media-fine grain sandstone from Black Hills. Sculpture shows Michael Russell standing with left hand tucked into breast pocket. The name "M. Russell" is carved on the base.

The Michael Russell statue on permanent display at the Days of '76 Museum in Deadwood is the only known surviving statue carved by James Riordan from the Black Hills. The statue was presented to the Russell family on December 24, 1894. Michael Russell was a Deadwood businessman and proprietor of the Buffalo Bar on historic Main Street. He is best known for his friendship with William "Buffalo Bill" Cody. In the 1980s, the Russell statue was discovered at the Russell home in Deadwood. In 2007, the Deadwood Historic Preservation Commission purchased the statue. Upon close examination, the Russell statue shares similar characteristics with other works created by James Riordan. This includes hand, arm, and body position, and facial proportions.

Description (1) horn dice cup possibly owned by Seth Bullock. Beginning on the proximal end, the cup is manufactured from animal horn. The end is hollowed out. A silver band (3/16" dia.) circumvents the outside of the horn opening. Attached to the band is wrapped gold wire. Wrapped wire acts as the hinge mechanism for the lid. The silver band is held in place with two gold wires shaped in the letters "S" and "B".
 The lid of the cup is made from silver sheet cut and grounded into oval to fit the horn opening (1.5 x 1.0" dia.). Three parallel silver bands create portion of the hinge and decorative piece. On either side of the hinged parallel bands engraved are the initials "S" and "B". Two 1/8" inch pieces of silver curl around to the finish the decorative piece.
 On the distal end at the end of the horn is a silver mushroomed shaped finial held in place with two gold studs. The horn appears to have some patina on exterior surface.

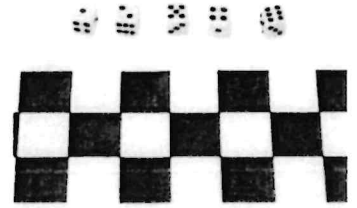

The contents of the dice cup include (5) dice 3/16" inch squares with blacken dot count. See record ART.2009.1.1a-e for description

Description Winchester Model 1894 30-30 rifle, serial number #4400820. Serial number applied for September 23, 1909 (Winchester Archives, Cody Firearms Museum). 80% original blue finish with wood forearm and stock with metal buttplate screwed into stock. Lyman ladder sight attached to the left side of receiver. Behind rear band and stamped on barrel "MANUFACTURED BY THE WINCHESTER REPEATING ARMS CO. NEW HAVEN CONN. U.S.A. PATENTED AUGUST 21, 1894". Looking down were barrel fits with the receiver, two identical cartouche. These are oval with the letters "P" bisected by the letter "W". On the left side of the rifle below the cartouche, stamped into the barrel "NICKEL STEEL BARREL ESPECIALLY FOR SMOKELESS POWDER" and "30 W.C.F." or Winchester Center Fire.

This area has been gouged in several spots beneath the text and right above where the wood and barrel come together. The "30" also gouged and scratched. On the underside of the rifle, stamped on the lower tang "MODEL 1894 WINCHESTER TRADEMARK". The serial number "440820" is engraved on the underside of the receiver. Stamped on the link is the number "27". Stamped on the finger level, is an equilateral triangle with the number "1" in center followed by the number "33". Engraved on the left side of the wood stock adjacent to the buttplate are the letters "H.M.Co." or Homestake Mining Company".

On 01/14/2015 HP Officer requested the firearm turned over to Deadwood History Inc./Days of 76 Museum for display purposes. City Archivist placed catalog # on the underside of the lever using laser generated label and applied label with undiluted Rhoplex B60-A and fine artist brush. Photograph of label lwas taken for reference. See January 2015 HP digital photographs. MR

Title Toggery Felt Cowboy Hat belonging to John Perret "Potato Creek Johnny" Artist Dunlap, New York Designer

Provenance Hat was purchased at two day auction hosted by the Dakota Plains Auction on June 17-18, 2012.

A letter authenticating the hat along with eight photographs and postcards accompanied the hat at time of purchase. (See ART.2012.03.2-9 in folders)

The Toggery was a men and boys clothing store in operation from 1936 to 1994 located at 117 N. Main Street in Butte, Montana. The Toggery was owned and operated by one family, the O'Neill during this time based on "History of the Toggery" from the Butte Archives (see printout in file).
