Juvenile Diversion - The Juvenile Diversion
Program, as defined in the C.R.S. §19-2-203.

Project Summary

Fort Collins Conflict Transformation Works (CTW) will provide restorative justice services as an accountability option for 35 youth referred from the 8th Judicial District Attorney's Office. Through the restorative justice process, youth will be held accountable for the harm caused while building on their strengths. Each youth will help develop a contract through which they can repair the harm they caused to the people affected by the incident, including their community, family, and themselves. The people harmed by the crime and community members will be included in every restorative conference. By completing the program, youth are diverted from deeper involvement in the justice system while taking meaningful steps to repair harm.

Grant Purpose

The purpose of the state grant program is to provide dedicated funding for Juvenile Diversion services across Colorado's judicial districts; the program is designed to support the legal framework of CRS 19-2.5-401. To satisfy Office of the State Controller (OSC) Competition Policy requirements, DCJ manages a specialized, non-competitive allocation and option-based selection process tailored to statutory requirements.

Grantee shall deliver all completed Work Product and all Work Product that was in the process of completion to the State at the State's request.

b. Payments

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary, the State shall only pay Grantee for accepted Work received as of the date of termination. If, after termination by the State, the State agrees that Grantee was not in breach or that Grantee's action or inaction was excusable, such termination shall be treated as a termination in the public interest, and the rights and obligations

Grantee: City of Fort Collins - Conflict Transformation Works

Each youth will help develop a contract through which they can repair the harm they caused to the people affected by the incident, including their community, family, and themselves. The people harmed by the crime and community members will be included in every restorative conference. By completing the program, youth are diverted from deeper involvement in the justice system while taking meaningful steps to repair harm.

Project Plan

This project will provide Restorative Justice as a diversion option for youth referred from the 8th Judicial District Attorney's (DA's) Office. In restorative justice, the purpose is to respond to the crime by identifying the harm caused, involving the people who were impacted, and holding the youth accountable for repairing the harm. The concerns of the youth, the harmed parties and the community are balanced. In this project there is a strong emphasis on identifying and recognizing a responsible youth's strengths, making this part of the assessment and discussion at all parts of the program.

Most juveniles are referred pre-file; some are referred post-file. Youth are screened at intake for substance abuse (SA) and mental health (MH). When recommended, further assessment and/or treatment become requirements of the program. CTW staff monitor contract completion and have a completion meeting with the responsible youth and their support people. The contract has three primary sections:

- Giving back to the victim (harmed persons)
- Giving back to the community
- Giving back to the self and family.

There is a minimum requirement of 20 restorative hours for a contract. The contract may contain treatment or supervision requirements such as counseling, drug/alcohol assessment or monitoring, participation in classes or programs, school counseling, contact or supervision, support groups, mentoring, etc. Each contract is designed for the specific incident and youth involved. The contract may include requirements from CTW staff based on screening and/or family requests, but other contract requirements are determined by the circle participants.

Conference participants include youth responsible for causing harm, youth support, harmed persons, harmed persons support, community representatives, affected community members, and often peer community members. CTW staff have an in-person intake meeting with the youth and support. Decisions about required referrals are made at this point. Screening tools used by the DA's and also by CTW include ARNA, YASI, and GAIN-SS. The youth and family are required to comply with what is recommended based on the screening, including counseling, further assessment, drug/alcohol monitoring/classes, etc.

CTW works with and refers to many community agencies including: the Center for Family Outreach, the Colorado State University (CSU) Center for Family and Couples Therapy (CFCT), LifeStance Counseling, Summitstone Health Center, and others. Families always have the option to use a provider of their choice for mental health services. Insurance is considered in weighing options.

For non-shoplifting cases, CTW staff invite the harmed persons to participate. If they do not want to participate or have a personal representative participate, the case is sent to the Reflect Program, which uses trained victim surrogates.

The process is voluntary for all participants. The youth must admit to their involvement in the incident. If there is monetary restitution, and the harmed person provides written verification of this damage, the youth and family must agree to pay it. CTW accepts petty, misdemeanor and felony cases referred through the diversion process. Most cases referred are misdemeanors and some are felonies. CTW also accepts youth on probation when a new offense is referred in lieu of sending the probationer back to court.

Each Restorative Justice (RJ) circle is built based on the needs and what will be of greatest benefit to the primary participants, the responsible youth and the people who were harmed. For example, an accountability contract can be adjusted and individualized to be accessible for youth with disabilities. CTW includes family members, school support people, peer and adult community members in the circle to assure support and understanding for the youth, in addition to accountability. CTW does the same for participating harmed parties. CTW works on cultural, developmental, and gender appropriateness by building every RJ circle individually, including the youth, family, and harmed person in deciding who should be part of the circle. Youth and their support people also have choice in determining how the youth can repair harm and what service the youth choose to do to give back to the community. The CTW programs have a very strong emphasis on the youth's strengths, making this part of the assessment and discussion at all parts of the program: intake, pre-conference, conference, contract development and completion circle.

During the intake process, screening is done for mental health issues as well as substance abuse. When identified, addressing these issues becomes part of the requirements for completing the program. They are considered "repairing the harm to self."

The services within the program include:

- Intake meeting with responsible youth and parent/s including screening for substance abuse and mental health
- Resource referrals based on screening results
- Pre-circle meetings with facilitators
- The restorative justice circle (face-to-face meeting with the harmed person, support for the harmed person, community members and family)
- Accountability contract requirements
- Check-ins and availability of staff during contract phase
- One or more follow-up meetings to verify contract compliance and assess how the youth and family have progressed.
- Contact and relationship opportunities with community volunteers

CTW staff are always available by phone or in person for questions or concerns. CTW provides pre-circle services and resource referrals for the people harmed by the incident, family members, and community members.

In-house services that support the direct services to youth responsible for harm, the people harmed, and the community include review and assessment of cases, background checks, records maintenance, case management services, volunteer recruitment, training and management, supervision and monitoring of contract compliance, collecting and reporting data, referral assistance for community service, counseling and other support services in the community.

In addition, CTW does a participant satisfaction survey for each youth participant, and for victims, community members, parents, and all other program participants. CTW staff also review and deliver letters of apology, restitution and other appropriate contract items.

CTW trains staff and volunteers to adhere to the Colorado Restorative Justice Practitioner Guidelines set forth by the Colorado Restorative Justice Coordinating Council and Colorado Coalition of Restorative Justice Practices (CCRJP).

Restorative practices used as part of the programming include:

- Restorative Justice Family/Community Conferences
- Youth assets emphasis in circle and contract
- Victim/Community Impact panels
- Meaningful community service
- Restitution
- Victim/Community representation in every circle
- Restorative contracts
- Pre-conferencing services
- Completion interviews and contract review
- Restorative language and approach throughout.

Graduated sanctions are also built into the system. Examples of sanctions and actions are listed below:

- If a youth re-offends while in the program, CTW staff consult with the DA representative, who determines next steps on a case-by-case basis with input from CTW staff.
- If a youth referred by probation re-offends while in the program, the additional sanctions are handled by the Probation Officer.
- In all cases, CTW communicates with the referring agency about the youth's participation in the program, and any completed contract items.
- Noncompliance: If a youth does not complete their contract by the deadline, CTW will work with the youth and family on the issues that caused noncompliance. Extensions are given for good reason, and support as needed. If the youth continues to be noncompliant, they are referred back to the DA's office, who determines next steps on a case-by-case basis with input from CTW staff.

Successful discharge from the program occurs when the youth completes the accountability contract and any required treatment, restitution, or other obligations. Unsuccessful discharge occurs when the youth withdraws, refuses to participate, re-offends and is removed from diversion, or remains non-compliant after support and extension options have been exhausted.

Goals and Objectives

GOAL 1: To prevent further involvement in the formal justice system for youth who commit crimes in our community.

Objective 1.1 Provide restorative justice conferencing as a diversion option for 35 youth

Outcome 35 youth will be served. 90% of youth will complete program requirements.

Measurement Number of youth receiving services during the time period. Percentage of youth who complete versus do not complete - goal is 90% or more. In addition, 90% or more of youth will report being happy with their experience.

Timeline 7/1/2026 - 6/30/2027

Objective 1.2 Provide the opportunity for individuals who are harmed (victim) and community members to have a voice in the restorative justice process.

Outcome 100% of RJ circles include representation of people harmed by crime and community members, and their concerns and needs are considered as part of the process. Individuals who were harmed and community members help identify the harm caused and meaningful ways for the youth to repair that harm. 95% of harmed individuals and community reps are happy with their RJ experience.

Measurement Case files and participant satisfaction surveys.

100% of RJ conferences will include one or more representatives of individuals harmed by crime and affected community members.

95% of harmed individuals and community reps are happy with their RJ experience.

Project Evaluation

Evaluation is conducted in collaboration with DCJ and the current provider, Infinite Frontiers. CTW is committed to contributing to the statewide collection of data that supports and informs juvenile diversion programming across Colorado. Internally, CTW evaluates the program through completion data, participant happiness surveys, participant comments, screening and referral information, and recidivism information provided by DCJ and the DA’s Office. These data points help CTW assess progress toward program objectives, identify youth needs, and make ongoing improvements to services and referral practices.

Beginning on January 2026, CTW transitioned from pre- and post-surveys for responsible youth to a results-based accountability post-survey approach. This updated approach is intended to measure change over time in a way that is more sustainable for the program to administer and analyze internally, while still providing useful information about participant experience and program impact.

CTW continues to collect participant happiness surveys for youth, individuals who experienced harm, parents, and other participants and reports that data annually. Program staff also collect completion data as a short-term measure of success.

CTW will continue to rely on information provided by DCJ and the DA's Office for the most relevant recidivism information. In prior reports from OMNI, CTW youth showed statistically significant changes in accountability, community connection, connection to familial and non-familial adults, decision making, locus of control, self-esteem, and stress. These results indicate that program services are effective in several of the desired areas of change. CTW also tracks the percentage of youth who require further mental health or substance use assessment, and that information influences program procedures and referral practices. Happiness data and participant comments are reviewed regularly and have long been used to improve programming. Evaluation findings are also used in grant applications and presentations to potential volunteers, community members, and other groups to communicate program impact and support ongoing community engagement.
