SUMMARY:	It is good for communities to plan for the future, especially in a high growth environment. Recently, the City's P&Z has begun focusing on planning for growth. In recent years the City has become more proactive in the planning realm by developing and adopting a capital improvements plan, a hydraulic study (of the water system), and a Future Land Use Map. In 2009 Freese and Nichols, with considerable citizen input, created a Comprehensive Plan for the City. Certain aspects of the plan were controversial, resulting in its never being approved. As current leaders have reviewed this plan, it appears it might be advantageous to update and implement portions of the 2009 Comprehensive Plan.
