Background Information

In 2001 The Texas Legislature with intent to address racial profiling issues enacted the Texas Racial profiling law. In 2009 Texas legislatures modified the racial profiling law adding new requirements. In 2017 Texas legislatures again made changes to the Texas racial profiling law which enacted the Sandra Bland Act and made changes to racial and ethnic designations. The Texas Racial Profiling law requires that Police departments across the State of Texas to have an independent audit of traffic contact data and to report the finding to the governing body. Hutchins Police department contacts have been reviewed by Del Carmen and Associates and the following report has been prepared in accordance with State law.
