Warning

If the owner of property which is subject to an enforcement proceeding before the enforcement board, or court transfers ownership of such property between the time the initial pleading was served and the time of the hearing, such owner shall:

- (1) Disclose in writing the existence and the nature of the proceedings to the prospective transferee;
- (2) Deliver to the prospective transferee a copy of the pleadings, notices, and other materials relating to the code enforcement proceedings received by the transferor;
- (3) Disclose, in writing, to the prospective transferee that the new owner will be responsible for compliance with the applicable code and with orders issued in the code enforcement proceedings;
- (4) File a notice with the code enforcement official of the transfer of the property, with the identity and address of the new owner and copies of the disclosures made to the new owner within five days after the date of the transfer.

A failure to make the disclosures described in paragraphs (1), (2) and (3) above before the transfer creates a rebuttal presumption of fraud. If the property is transferred before the hearing, the proceeding shall not be dismissed, but the new owner shall be provided a reasonable period to correct the violation before the hearing is heard.

There are three other questions, also worthy of our consideration, pertaining to the use of the term transformation in the literature:

- 1. How different is mutation in the laboratory from spontaneous mutation? (Spontaneous mutation is a term that is not commonly used in the literature.)
- 2. How different is mutation in the laboratory from spontaneous mutation?
- 3. How different is mutation in the laboratory from spontaneous mutation?

The answer to all three questions is: "No." The term transformation is used in the literature to describe a wide variety of processes, and it is not clear that the term is used in a consistent manner.
