The committee agreed to meet on the fourth Monday of each month, with the following dates scheduled:

- September 23, 2024

Next Meeting Focus:

The committee decided to focus the next meeting on discussing parking, traffic, and noise as they relate to agritourism. Additionally, staff will provide examples of agritourism regulations from other communities and a summary of relevant complaints received by the town.

The committee reached a consensus that future meetings should focus on key issues impacting the community, particularly parking, traffic, and noise management. These areas were identified as priorities for developing guidelines and best practices to ensure agritourism businesses operate responsibly while preserving the rural character of Loxahatchee Groves.

The committee also discussed the role of code enforcement in addressing any violations and suggested that agritourism operators engage in self-regulation to proactively manage potential impacts, particularly around traffic and safety. While the committee does not support overly restrictive measures on the number of visitors or cars, they agreed that traffic flow and parking should be carefully managed to avoid issues for both the town and local residents.

To further guide the committee's decisions, members requested that town staff provide a summary of complaints related to agritourism over the past 12 to 24 months, focusing on recurring concerns. Additionally, the committee agreed to review agribusiness regulations from other communities to incorporate successful practices and avoid potential pitfalls, ensuring agritourism remains a positive aspect of the town's economy and culture.
