

To the City of Manor,

Hello, my name is Maggie and I am the skill game vendor that works with the Fogata Meat Market located in Manor Texas. I have had the pleasure of working with Duc Lu for a few months now. It has come to my attention that the city is asking for the machines to be removed immediately due to the distance of the church. As a vendor, you get to know people and how they run their businesses. What I do know is that Duc Lu has been operating as a business owner in the city of Manor for 16 years. He keeps his store clean and trouble free. He has served the city well and continues to pay all his taxes and fees on time. Over the years, it may have been a booming profitable business, but it's not that way these days. Our skill games are keeping his business alive. Many other stores have moved into the area. Some of those businesses have skill games, leaving him with an even bigger disadvantage. They need the games to financially stay afloat, and I think in this case, it's fair to make an exception. The church is in favor of him keeping the machines. All I ask is that you can consider this. For a business that has gone 16 years without any disturbances, I am hoping the city can please allow Duc Lu to keep his machines. Rules are great for keeping the order and peace of the city, but I also feel sometimes as a community we need to have compassion for others, especially those who deserve it.

Thank you,

Maggie Stewart
