3. Review and Provide Feedback for the Drafted Outline of the Guide to Meridian Public Art Document

A. Belnap explained the drafted outline for the Public Art Plan to the Subcommittee, asking for the feedback of the Subcommittee on the draft.

L. Taylor expressed she thought it was all a bit too much, might overcomplicate the idea. J. Peters brought up the examples of other city's plans and how in-depth they go, usually becoming 40+ pages long. B. Griffith stated that she felt the plan would answer any questions anyone has related to public art in Meridian. R. Wardle agreed that all the documents separately seem overwhelming, but when put together in a single document with an index is better to manage. T. Vannucci warned to beware of the passive voice- look for a more active, specific voice- "do x to achieve y." He also suggested to add a measurement tool.

A. Belnap will fill out the draft and the Subcommittee will plan a workshop for the first half of January.
