Public Comment:

- Steve Gladwell said he recently collected 333 names on petition I talked to a lot of people in our community won't go into all the pitfalls for the zoning industrial 3, most of the concern have been the environmental, and fear of the future home equities and current. Most of the people he talked with understood the need for gross receipts tax not at the expense of industrial 3. He then stated that there are individuals that will be considered in a legal fund if needed.
- Tommy Westmorland Goddard Court said he listened to the workshop about encroachments, You cannot enforce on every encroachment and then began explaining that we have to act like a city, and you can't enforce every encroachment you got to enforce what you have the money to enforce. He explained there should be a survey of the City and don't cow-tie down to this guy he was wrong for putting building it out there. He then said this week he was listening to the radio and New Mexico is in number 3 at administrative cost for government and he knows you guys are working on the budget. He then asked about the police department, are you having a holding cell. There will be no holding cell. Asked about the COVID money is it all gone. Have we found a way to spend it all. Gross receipt tax is the right thing to do he then asked if the lawsuit with AC Disposal still pending. Ok it is gone. Mil-Levy is going to be raised I understand, last thing going to be the never-ending Gordon Reeves is it ever going to leave us.
- Jeremiah Linscott Vista Del Rio, he was reading the comprehensive plan 1.08 would like to establish an oversight I would like to acknowledge it says that the city will respond back to public comments within ten days. I would like to do start a civil oversight commission especially when it comes to volunteering. He then read 1.09 and said this is where the civil oversight commission would come in they would have time and resources to look at laws and ordinances and a direct line to the Council, Mayor and any other city officials and will work for the residence. He then read NM code R1.8.4.9 sub section 8. He then said that the city needs help from volunteers.
