Craft Chambers		Connor (10) and Makayla (8), with mild help from their mom, have their own 3D printing booth that is well loved by kids and adults alike. While they may not be forming the art with their hands, plenty of hands on work is required and as they prep, load and manage their prints. With Jewelry making, artists take the machine made supplies and assemble them. With 3-d printing, these kids flip the hands on part and make their own parts! The hands on work to create and prep the items and assemble and process are in the first and last steps with print work in the middle. This looks like just the event they've been searching for! They will certainly include a variety of Halloween and seasonal items in their offerings, among their other much loved animals and	Young entrepreneurs bring a special kind of joy to community events.
